Dear [REDACTED]

Freedom of Information Request – FOI2024/00796

We are writing in response to your email received by Post Office Limited (“Post Office”) on 16 May, which has been dealt with under the terms of the Freedom of Information Act 2000 (“FOIA”).

In your email you have requested the information shown verbatim in bold below:

“Can you please confirm what date [REDACTED], [REDACTED] [REDACTED] at Post Office who gave evidence to the Inquiry on [REDACTED] [REDACTED] 24, started work at POL and what posts he has held, with dates when those positions were held?”

We can confirm that we do hold information relevant to your request. However, Post Office believes that the disclosure of the information requested would put at risk the safety of employees. Post Office therefore relies upon the exemption provided in section 38(1)(a) of the Act, concerning the Health and Safety of individuals.

As section 38(1)(a) of the FOIA is a qualified exemption, we have had to balance the public interest in withholding the information against the public interest in disclosure.

We recognise that there is a public interest in disclosure of information relating to Post Office employees, including dates of employment and the positions held by employees. We particularly understand the public interest, given the Horizon IT Scandal and the ongoing Post Office Horizon IT Inquiry.

However, Post Office believes that there is a high degree of risk attached to the disclosure of information concerning any individual and is clear that there is a strong public interest in protecting the physical and mental wellbeing of its employees. Given the recent intense public scrutiny of Post Office – including of past and present employees via social media – there is a duty of care required of Post Office as an employer, to ensure that information placed into the public domain under the Act will not have a detrimental impact on the physical and mental health of an individual.

Placing the information, you have requested into the public domain, will increase the likelihood of endangering the physical or mental health of these people, and this is not in the public interest. Given there is a strong public interest in protecting the safety of Post Office employees, in our opinion, the public interest therefore lies in maintaining the exemption and withholding the requested information.

If you are dissatisfied with the handling of this response, you do have a right to request an internal review. You can do this by writing to the address above within 40 working days of receipt of this response stating your reasons for your internal review request or alternatively, by emailing information.rights@postoffice.co.uk.

If, having requested an internal review by Post Office, you are still not satisfied with our response you also have a right of appeal to the Information Commissioner at:
