Dear [REDACTED],

Freedom of Information Request – FOI2024/00783

We are writing in response to your email received by Post Office Limited (“Post Office”) on 14 May, which has been dealt with under the terms of the Freedom of Information Act 2000 (“FOIA”). We sincerely apologise for the delay in our response.

In your email you have requested the information shown verbatim in bold below:

“Please can you disclose all email correspondence between PO CEO, Paula Vennells, and PO Chair, Alice Perkins, between June 2013-October 2013 inclusive. Please include any briefings for meetings or calls between Vennells and Perkins within this period.”

We can confirm that Post Office does hold the information you have requested.

Having carefully considered the correspondence between former Post Office Chief Executive, Paula Vennells, and former Post Office Chair, Alice Perkins, we believe that the information engages the exemption pursuant to sections 36(2)(b)(ii) of the FOIA. This is because in the opinion of the Post Office’s Qualified Person, the disclosure would be likely to inhibit the free and frank exchange of views for the purposes of deliberation.

Section 36 is qualified by the public interest. This means that even though the exemption is considered to be engaged, it is necessary to consider whether the public interest in maintaining the exemption outweighs the public interest in disclosure.

The Post Office's Qualified Person notes that there are many factors in favour of maintaining the exemption, including to preserve the ability for senior public authority staff to discuss internal matters in an open and safe space. Publishing these internal deliberations would be likely to lead to a chilling effect which would not enable the free and frank exchange of views and opinions, nor allow space for necessary debate and healthy challenge at Board level.

The correspondence provides a great deal of internal insight into how Post Office works. These discussions between the Chief Executive and the Chair, relate to business-critical issues at Post Office. This information is highly sensitive and regular disclosure of this information would be likely to lead to the chilling effect mentioned above, thus negatively affecting Post Office's decision making.

On the other hand, the Post Office's Qualified Person has also considered a number of factors, including the passage of time that has taken place since the discussions took place, and recent evidence given at the Post Office Horizon IT ("POHIT") Inquiry. Whilst a number of the issues raised in the correspondence still exist and are still relevant to ongoing Post Office business, these reports are now over 11 years old. Disclosure of these documents would enable the public to better understand how the Chief Executive worked with the Chair. It would also support Post Office's commitment to transparency and allow for public debate and scrutiny.

Therefore, despite the arguments made relating to the chilling effect and safe space to discuss internal matters, it is the Qualified Person's opinion that the public interest is now balanced in favour of transparency on these matters and thus falls into disclosure of the information, except where any other exemptions may exist.

Therefore, please find the correspondence between former Post Office Chief Executive, Paula Vennells, and former Chair, Alice Perkins, from 1 June 2013 to 31 October 2013, in the document titled, "FOI2024_00783 – Information_redacted.pdf".

As per your FOIA request, we have only included emails that were sent directly from one of these individuals to the other, and, therefore, we have not included any emails where one of these individuals was either copied into an email from a different person, or where the email was addressed to a different person not named in your FOIA request. We have also removed emails from the chains where they sent to only one of the named individuals.

We have withheld some information under sections 40(2) and 40(3A) of the FOIA as the information constitutes personal data relating to other persons. These sections exempt personal information from disclosure if that information relates to someone other than the applicant, and if disclosure of that information would breach any of the data protection principles in Article 5(1) of the UK General Data Protection Regulation (“GDPR”).

We consider that disclosure of this information is likely to breach the first data protection principle, which provides that personal data must be processed lawfully, fairly, and in a transparent manner. Disclosure would not constitute 'fair' processing of the personal data because the information relates to the names and contact details of junior employees who would not reasonably expect this to be disclosed in relation to this request for information.

If you are dissatisfied with the handling of this response, you do have a right to request an internal review. You can do this by writing to the address above within 40 working days of receipt of this response stating your reasons for your internal review request or alternatively, by emailing information.rights@postoffice.co.uk.

If, having requested an internal review by Post Office, you are still not satisfied with our response you also have a right of appeal to the Information Commissioner at:
